EDMONTON BULLETIN, SEPT. 26TH, 1928.

TWO SIDES TO THE QUESTION.

Amongst a mass of anti-prohibition literature with which the BULLETIN was favored from an unknown source by last mail, appears a card on one side of which is printed "Ten good reasons why I will vote 'no' on the plebiscite. Polling day Thursday, Sept. 29th." On the other side are the reasons. As they are no doubt intended to reach as many voters as possible before polling day the BULLETIN reproduces them, with comments:

1. Because I value personal liberty.
Prohibition differs not in kind, but only in degree, from the restrictions on personal liberty imposed by the liquor license laws, and regulations respecting the sale of certain drugs, which are found to be necessary and expedient.

2. Because prohibition would necessitate the raising of nearly $9,000,000 annually by direct taxation.

Nine million dollars raised by direct taxation would be paid in larger proportion by the rich than by the poor, therefore the taxation would be fairer than at present, and no greater.

3. Because the debt of the country would be increased by from $15,000,000 to $25,000,000 to compensate those whose business would be ruined.

If the payment of $25,000,000 would secure the permanent enforcement of prohibition it would be cheap at the money.

4. Because it would throw thousands of men out of work and place them on the already over-crowded labor market.

It would cause many more thousands of men who idle away their time or waste their wages, to earn money and use it to advantage.

5. Because prohibition has proved a failure wherever and whenever tried, and leads to dives and secret drinking—for example, the Scott act.

It has never been tried as a national measure.

6. Because prohibition would create ill-feeling and breed informers, spies and perjurers.

Again, possibly a difference in degree but certainly not in kind, from the present license and excise laws.

7. Because prohibition would ruinously affect many other lines of trade and lead to wholesale smuggling.

Not true to any large extent as to the first part. Under present law whiskey smuggling is an important industry on the shores of the St. Lawrence river and Gulf.

8. Because it would be class legislation and would lead to further restrictions on personal liberty.

Only as the present license and excise laws are, and do.

9. Because it would require an army of officials if an attempt were made to enforce it, and even then it could not be enforced.

That would depend upon the extent to which it was supported by public sentiment. The object of the plebiscite is to find out what is the sentiment of the public on this subject.

10. Because experience has shown that it is the worst method of dealing with intemperance and that it induces the weak and vicious to use drugs and other dangerous stimulants.

Absolutely denied by friends of prohibition. As they have no financial interest in the success of their views, their opinions should be entitled to as much weight as the opinions of those who have a large direct financial interest in the failure of prohibition.

THE VOTE ON PROHIBITION.

That the vote for and against prohibition to be cast on the 29th instant, is of the very highest importance to the temperance cause admits of no doubt, but there seems to be lack of definite understanding as to the proper result should the majority be found to favor the prohibition cause. The question is asked: Are you in favor of prohibition? and it appears to be taken for granted by many people that if the answer is Yes the question is settled and that prohibition will be enforced automatically. In other words that the government will be responsible if absolute prohibition is not at once enforced. That the government will be responsible—provided the vote is sufficiently large to be an undoubted guarantee of the mind of the people—if measures are not taken to bring about a practicable measure of prohibition is perfectly clear. The mistake is to suppose that the vote for prohibition ends the fight, when in reality it only begins it. Taking for granted that the prohibition party will poll the majority of a large vote, a mandate has been issued by the people on a certain principle. But the details necessary to the working out of that principle are still to be provided through the ordinary course of parliament—have still to be dealt with as business matters. Just how these various details are to be worked out is a matter upon which there may be many divergent views,—as well as just how far they are, any or all, immediately expedient and practicable. It is the belief of many good people who look down upon ordinary politics, that the plebiscite is an expedient whereby an important moral question can be lifted—as they are pleased to put it—out of the political arena. As a matter of fact the plebiscite taken on an abstract question, is a means of projecting that question into the political arena, there to be dealt with as the judgment of the people expressed through their representatives finally decides. The position is plain enough if people stop to consider. If the details were already worked out they would be submitted to vote, as in the case of a municipal by-law. But it is quite evident that if the details of a prohibitory law were covered by the answer Yes or No, the measure would stand a much smaller chance of the approval of a majority of the people; for thousands who have no hesitation in voting for the general principle could be persuaded on grounds of self interest or prejudice or possibly even fair judgment to vote against one or the other detail and so against the whole bill. So much is this recognized to be the fact that when a report was circulated that the question on the ballot paper was to contain some reference to direct taxation, there was a unanimous protest from temperance people throughout the country that it was unfair to mix up a question of detail with the main question of principle. If the placing of one question of detail on the ballot paper was likely to lose an important part of the popular vote for prohibition what might be expected to happen if all the important and intricate controversial questions were placed there, as they necessarily would be if a complete prohibitory law were submitted. Then if it were dangerous to submit details to the popular vote it must also be difficult, although more possible, to have those same questions decided in parliament, by a body of men bearing full responsibility individually and collectively for their actions and the results of those actions, and holding the power to direct legislation only by grace of a parliamentary majority.

In the Swiss republic where government by the people is carried further probably than in any other country, the idea of submitting important questions to a direct vote of the people has been worked out to a conclusion by two systems which are called respectively the initiative and the referendum. The latter named was the first to be tried. Under that system a complete law framed by the Swiss parliament is submitted to popular vote before being given effect. In the case of a leading principle, the details for the working out of which are simple, this plan is found satisfactory—just as it is in the case of a town by-law. But it was also found if the details were complicated that the chances of even the best and most important measure receiving the popular approval were slight, as the combined votes of those objecting to the different provisions of the bill were frequently sufficient to kill it, although the majority approved of the principle. In such cases the system of the initiative is adopted, and the people vote on the principle only; their vote being an order to parliament to supply the working details by ordinary process of legislation. This is exactly the position of the prohibition question in the approaching contest. It is a vote to initiate legislation; while nine men out of every ten in speaking of it seem to consider that it is merely a vote to endorse a completed law. What is necessary on the one hand on the present occasion is that enough of the people shall vote for prohibition to compel the question to be taken up in parliament; and on the other, either that a majority of those voting shall by declaring their opposition, prevent its being so taken up, or that not enough people on either side shall vote to warrant parliament in taking it up. In the nature of things they have two chances of winning against the one of the prohibitionists, and their victory, if it is a victory, is more complete. This is not said for the discouragement of prohibitionists, but to impress upon them the necessity of registering every vote on Thursday next, if they do not intend to be snuffed out as an active force for some years at least. This is an occasion to test the mettle of those who favor prohibition. If there are not enough voters in the country strongly enough in favor of that cause to turn out on polling day and poll a strong majority vote for prohibition, the public sentiment of Canada is not ripe for national prohibitory legislation. But if with no other inducement than a regard for their principles, enough of them come out and vote, besides being a mandate for parliamentary action it will indicate that their convictions and numbers are strong enough to push their cause successfully through its subsequent stages to a completed law properly enforced. It should always be remembered that the law is not the wording of the statute, but the enforcement of its terms, and that in the nature of things there can be no enforcement of law under popular government unless popular opinion supports the law, not only in its wording, but also in its enforcement.

The Free Press is getting funnier every day. On Sept. 19th, under the editorial heading "Mr. Haultain's threat," it says: "Major Walsh was clothed with unquestioned authority to do even illegal things." It adds: "The Ottawa government, not Major Walsh, is responsible for everything done in the Yukon."—which to say the least is decidedly rough on the government, particularly as the statement comes from their newly constituted apologist in chief for the west.

PIRE.
G. Hutton's building, occupied by Arm strong Bros. as a grocery and by Mr. Hutton as a dwelling and warehouse, was destroyed by fire Thursday night. The building to on the south side of Jasper avenue and on the second lot west of McDougall street. The fire was first noticed by R. Robertson shortly after ten o'clock. It was seen through one of the east side windows, and seemed to have started very shortly before. It was burning amongst some empty barrels in the warehouse part and close to the partition separating that part from Armstrong Bros' store. The alarm was given at once, and the chemical was promptly on the ground, before the fire had made much headway. As long as the supply of water in the chemical lasted good progress was made in keeping down the flames. But the supply did not last long. The building was entirely of wood, not plastered inside, and very dry, consequently the fire spread very rapidly. The steam fire engine was at the tanks at the fire hall and the hose laid. Water was on in about ten minutes from the alarm being given. One stream was shortly increased to two, and the flames were kept down wonderfully by the deluge of water. Bellamy's implement warehouse, which stood on the corner lot closely adjoining Hutton's, had been moved back a few days before so that its front for about 20 feet only projected alongside the burning building. The efforts of the firemen were principally directed to saving this building, which was done, although it also was of wood only, and perfectly dry. Chinnick's shoe shop about three feet distant from the burning building on the west side, was pulled to pieces to prevent the fire from catching it and so spreading to Detroit's shop, and on to Walsh's grain warehouse, the engine having its work cut out in saving Bellamy's building. Fortunately the evening was calm and very foggy, which of course reduced the danger of the fire spreading to the lowest point. The flood of water thrown on the burning building was so great that parts of the walls are still standing, and the floor is not burnt. A pile of coal in the warehouse did not catch fire. A lot of wagon wheels in the warehouse are charred but not burnt, and some metal plows are only partly scorched. The building filled so quickly with smoke that very little was saved. Armstrong Bros lost practically their whole stock. Bellamy loses everything which he had stored in the warehouse part of the building. Hutton loses all his household effects except his piano; also a number of new sleighs and other articles which he had stored in his part of the warehouse. Chinnick has lost his building and suffers the damage done to his stock and machines by hasty removal. Bellamy suffers loss by hasty removal of the implements in his own warehouse, but the building is none the worse.

PORT SASKATCHEWAN.
Rev. Mr. McKittick came in from Saddle lake yesterday and went on to Edmonton. Mr. Asher, of Beaver lake, has bought G. Ross' cottage and will move into the village. A representative of Mr. Mathers is here photographing. Measles has been prevalent for some time, but is now pretty well over. On Tuesday evening Mr. Langworthy gave a dinner to Mr. Mariaggi and some other friends. Sept. 22, '98.

GLENGARRY.
A quiet entertainment was given by the children of Gengarry school on Friday evening, the 18th inst. The affair was under the management of Miss Mary B. McMillan, Miss Sarah Bell and Miss Bella McDonald, who formed themselves into a committee, and carried the concert to a successful issue. The programme consisted of music, vocal and instrumental, interspersed with recitations and dialogues; the whole neatly arranged, and well rendered. Mr. Mr. R. R. McDonald, who is in himself "as good as a crowd," gave some choice selections on the violin and John D. McDonald, though under disadvantages, sang a solo in his own happy manner. Harvesting is in full blast. Threshing will commence this week. Mr. Dowland sold his farm a few weeks ago for the handsome sum of $1,900. This included crop as well. Mr. Roberg, from the State of Massachusetts, is the purchaser. R. A. McDonald, who with J. M. McDougall, went north with supplies about the 1st of August, has returned home safe and sound. He made a successful trip. The first prairie fire this season blew up with the breeze on Saturday evening. No harm was done, though Mr. D. McMillan's residence was in the immediate vicinity. Water in most of the wells is low. 19 Sept., 1898.

FOR PROHIBITION.
Edmonton, 24th, Sept. '98.
EDITOR BULLETIN.

Sir: Will you kindly permit me space in your valuable paper for ten (and one more) reasons why I should vote "Yes" for prohibition on Thursday, Sept. 29th.

- 1 Because it is my privilege and duty to respect the freedom and welfare of the other five-sixths of the people who do not enjoy the privilege of the franchise.
- 2 Because the revenue obtained from intoxicating liquor entails a direct loss on the country of at least five times the amount of the revenue collected.
- 3 Because the money used in this (to the nation) unprofitable traffic would find investment in enterprise which might assist in the progress and development of the country.
- 4 Because "the said" transferred capital would create employment for at least two men for every one now engaged by the traffic.
- 5 Because prohibition wherever given a fair trial has proved a blessing.
- 6 Because intoxicants have always bred criminals, paupers and lunatics.
- 7 Because prohibition would tend to the promoting of trade on true business or moral principles and correct many irregularities now common.
- 8 Because prohibition would help to promote sound legislation for the benefit of all concerned, whether they had a voice at the poll or not.
- 9 Because prohibition would decrease the number of constables, officers of justice, etc., and the consequent expense sustained from the pockets of the ratepayers.
- 10 Because where prohibition has been longest tested the large majority of the people are in favor of its continuance, and
- 11 Because having spent twelve (of what should have been the best) years of my life in the preparing and selling of intoxicating liquors I know the evil of the traffic and disastrous results. Therefore Mr. Editor for my own preservation and the safety of my neighbors, will I vote "Yes" at the poll on the 29th.

Yours truly,
PRO PATRIA.
PROHIBITION.
The following statement as to the result of prohibition in Maine has been sent the BULLETIN by a correspondent: MAINE.
"Taxation reduced under prohibition 5 per cent. Valuation increased 31 per cent. Local and State indebtedness decreased 32.86 per cent. Long experience has demonstrated the wisdom and advantages of PROHIBITION."
(Signed)
GOVERNOR E. C. BURLEIGH.

HOME ENEMIES.
They Mislead and Deceive Inexperienced Women.

Home enemies in the form of package dyes and dye composed of a large proportion of common soap and very little coloring matter, are creating great loss and consternation in many homes. These deceptive dyes that only benefit the manufacturer and retailer with fat profits, mislead and deceive inexperienced women. The women who regularly use the Diamond Dyes are never deceived. Diamond Dye users find in the Diamond Dyes all that the manufacturers promise—purity, fastness, fullness of color and great brilliancy. To those who have been deceived by cheap, trashy dyes, we say with confidence, "Give the Diamond Dyes a trial, and you will bless the day that such dyes were given to women." Diamond Dyes color anything any color.
